Improving the Quality of Life for Older Adults

Anchored by the Older Americans Act

When the Older Americans Act (OAA) was signed into law in 1965, it was largely considered the most significant piece of aging legislation to date. The OAA is reauthorized by Congress every few years. The 1973 reauthorization of the OAA created Area Agencies on Aging (AAAs) to oversee and deliver vital home and community-based programs. Today, there are over 600 AAAs throughout the U.S. providing OAA programs to older adults in their communities. Federal AAA oversight and allocation of OAA-authorized funds is conducted through the Administration for Community Living (ACL). Within the commonwealth, the Pennsylvania Department of Aging (www.aging.pa.gov) allocates ACL funding and governs the 52 AAAs that serve Pennsylvanians locally.

Philadelphia Corporation for Aging (PCA) has been an established AAA since 1973 and serves older adults and adults with disabilities in Philadelphia County. PCA provides vital programs that allow individuals to remain engaged in their communities and empowered in their homes. PCA is a private, nonprofit, nationally-recognized Area Agency on Aging funded primarily through federal and state sources.

PCA: Philadelphia's Area Agency on Aging

Philadelphia Corporation for Aging (PCA) is the first place for older Philadelphians and adults with disabilities to turn to for information and services to help maintain or improve the quality of their lives. One of the region's largest nonprofits, PCA offers or provides (through over 200 contracted providers) services to help older Philadelphians and adults with disabilities living in Philadelphia. In collaboration with both aging advocates and AAA associations on both the state and national level, Pennsylvania Association of Area Agencies on Aging (P4A) and USAging, PCA also works to spotlight older Philadelphians and bring visibility to their needs.
