EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Philadelphia Corporation for Aging (PCA) is the first place for older Philadelphians and adults with disabilities to turn to for information and services to help maintain or improve the quality of their lives. One of the region's largest nonprofits, PCA offers or provides (through over 200 contracted providers) services to help more than 140,000 older Philadelphians and adults with disabilities living in Philadelphia. In collaboration with both aging advocates and AAA associations on both the state and national level, Pennsylvania Association of Area Agencies on Aging (P4A) and USAging, PCA also works to spotlight older Philadelphians and bring visibility to their needs.

PCA's goals are achieved, in part, through a wide range of outreach, community education and special events and activities held throughout the year that target older adults, clergy, social workers, aging network professionals and Philadelphia's business community and donors. This proposal identifies collaborative opportunities that would be mutually beneficial and supportive of helping your organization and PCA build brand awareness, increase recognition of the resources you offer to older Philadelphians, and reinforce your organization's position as a community leader in the field of aging.
